The Aging's Legal Services Program reports that approximately 5 million elders who are 60 years old and older have experienced some form of abuse, exploitation, neglect, or physical abuse, emotional abuse, or financial abuse — and nobody should have to go through a difficult time in their lives — it is important that you protect yourself and your loved ones. Learn the most common form of abuse

What is Elder abuse?

Elder abuse can include physical abuse, emotional abuse, sexual abuse, exploitation, neglect, or abandonment. Perpetrators include other family members, spouses, neighbors, in home aides, & staff as well as nursing homes, assisted living, and other facilities. Elder abuse occurs in all parts of the state — urban and rural areas. Despite the high cost, economic, social, and community impact, the majority of abused elders report it to the police.

The most common form of elder abuse reported is neglect.

If you notice changes in an older adult's personality, behavior or finances, you should start to question what is going on.

In New York, if you suspect abuse or neglect, nobody should have to go without help. When it comes to protecting your rights, you can contact the Adult Protective Services unit of the New York State Department of Health. This is the unit that may be dispatched to your home or the home of a loved one, where they can assess the situation, replace the battery and upload the device's data, remake the personalized wristband, and work with the caregiver to help keep the older adult safe.
